

1. On Facebook and Instagram I'm giving away the school I have attended or am attending and which town I live in. I don't give away any information on Twitter, and I don't use Snapchat.
2. I find a lot of stuff related to the Google services I use, including my app usage, Google Maps timeline, YouTube history, Google Fit data and more. And these are used for personalized search and ads.
3. I didn't find any information about myself when I googled my name. I do have a common name (among younger Chinese people) that gives me lots of results.
4. I tried the first two websites. I did not find any additional information about myself, although the reverse phone number lookup on the second website did yield one wrong result. There isn't a way to have the entry removed from the site.
